Cort Gallup is the News and Sports Editor for the Maui Weekly newspaper. Being a Native American, and through the study and experience of Native Americans, Gallup has learned what is the top priority in our lives. The people. Almost all Native American tribe names translate in English to "the people," and there is a good reason for that. Everything is truly about the people. Through investigative reporting of Maui's toughest issues and his experience producing his weekly column "A Cort Gallup Poll," Gallup has a firm grasp of who exactly are Maui's people, and exactly what it is they want from their government.

Cort Gallup is a single father living in Kihei. His son Tyler is 21 months old and is Maui built.
